

The C-Group Roundtable for Business Leaders

The number one task of business leaders is to make decisions. You do it every day, all day long. Decisions about strategy, operations, people, finance, partners and more. What is the value of a tough decision well-made? What is the cost of a poor choice? What a help it would be if you had the perspectives and experience of other smart leaders to factor into your decisions.

The C-Group: Business Leaders Roundtable provides business leaders with

1. Timely insights on business challenges from experienced peers,
2. Proven, effective learning methodology,
3. A proven effective structure and process,
4. A confidential forum in which to learn from peers and share your experience,
5. Camaraderie and networking with others who know what it is like to have the responsibility of running an organization and that it is 'lonely at the top'.

How it works

- The group meets for 4 hours, approximately once a month, ten times a year.
- Group members convene and share brief updates.
- Timely and relevant current and future challenges and opportunities for their businesses are selected based on group inputs.
- These topics are discussed using structured processes.
- Meetings are held at various member locations throughout the Madison area.
- Members utilize one another's wisdom as desired between formal meetings.

This group is led by Scott Savage, MA, PC, principal of Scott Savage Consulting LLC. Scott brings more than 30 years' experience consulting with myriad businesses and other organizations. He has been trained by the Edward Lowe Foundation in research-based, best practices in peer learning methods and has led business groups for the UW-Madison School of Business since 2004.
